which will consider the repeal bill. "The President is supposed to be fully advised as to the views of foreign nations upon this question," said Senator Simmons to-day, "and, with this knowledge, in his recent message to Congress he declared in unequivocal terms that there is no division of opinion among foreign nations upon this question, and that they are unanimous in the opinion that the exemption clause does violate the Hay-Pauncefote treaty.

Under the Constitution, the President advises the country that foreign governments regard the exemption clause of the canal act as a violation of the treaty, he announces not only to Congress and the country but to the world, that he fully concurs in this construction and conclusion, and it is understood that the Secretary of State entertains the views expressed by the President upon this subject.

"So that we have the President and the Secretary of State—charged by the Constitution with the duty of representing this government in its foreign relations—agreeing with other governments in their construction of the treaty, and declaring to the world that the exemption clause, which it is now sought to repeal, is in violation of this treaty and the obligations it imposes upon us.

"Under these circumstances, I feel that to refuse to repeal this clause of the canal act, as recommended by the President, is, upon the ground that, in his opinion, it violates our treaty obligations, would place this government in a very embarrassing and humiliating attitude before the world, and I feel it is my duty to vote for the repeal."

HOME RULE BILL ON SECOND READING

Amendment for Rejection of Bill Defeated by Majority of Eighty Votes.
SPEECHES ARE CONCILIATORY
Opposition Interprets Figures as Proof of Dwindling Government Support.

London, April 6.—By a majority of 89, an amendment for the rejection of the home rule bill was defeated in the House of Commons to-night, and without a division the bill was given for a third time its second reading in the House.

The announcement of the figures evoked louder cheers from the opposition than from the ministerialists, the opposition interpreting them as gratifying proof of a dwindling government majority. But the diminution is accounted for, to some extent, by the abstention from voting of the O'Brienites.

The speeches to-day were generally much more conciliatory in tone than those which marked the bill's earlier passages. John E. Redmond, the Nationalist leader, who opened the debate, began by holding out the olive branch to Ulster in a speech of great eloquence, but insisted that it was impossible for him and his colleagues to agree to the permanent exclusion of Ulster and to abandon the principle of Ireland as a nation.

Andrew Bonar Law, the opposition leader, though professing in certain passages of his speech to see hardly any hope of a peaceful settlement, and predicting that civil war was certain if the government persisted in pushing the bill through, believed that he and his colleagues would gladly accept a proposal for the renewal of the negotiations with the government leaders, but feared that nothing would come of it.

Augustine Birrell, Chief Secretary for Ireland, was most optimistic. Despite all adverse criticism, he was certain that great progress had been made to-day, he declared, was impossible. The second reading of the home rule bill was carried the first time by a majority of 161, and the second time by a majority of 158. To-night eight two Liberals voted against the government, and Nationalists were absent through illness. Three Laborites also were absent, and Charles F. G. Mason, a member of the government, was absent in the election for Bethnal Green last February. An eighth took no part in the voting, as he recently resigned, to stand for re-election on his own account, and previously Sir Edward Grey's departure from London is said to have no political significance, as he is taking a holiday, which he arranged for some time ago.

A large gathering of Irishmen, all carrying green flags, assembled outside Parliament to-night to celebrate the passage of the bill. They cheered wildly when the result of the vote was announced, and gave ovations to the members of the government and the Nationalist leaders as they left the house.

"Speaking of the harmful effects of baker's white bread, Dr. Edson Smith says: 'Baker's bread is an abomination to the stomach. Its fine flour, its yeast and its undextrinized starch make it largely undigestible. Only the well-baked outer crust is fit to eat.'"—Rutledge Rutherford in Nat'l Food Magazine, February, 1912.

Some 17 years ago there was originated a food designed to avoid the objectionable qualities of white flour products.

That food is

Grape-Nuts

It established a standard of digestibility and food value hitherto unapproached in any cereal food.

This object was attained—

By building Grape-Nuts from the two greatest of food-grains—wheat and barley—and baking and rebaking it until the starchy parts were converted into dextrose (grape-sugar) or so thoroughly dextrinized as to require but little effort to digest.

Grape-Nuts digests usually in about one hour

(White Bread requires about 31-2 hours for digestion)

In the milling of white flour, nearly all the "vital" mineral salts of the grain (such as phosphorus, lime, iron, sulphur, etc.) are thrown out with the bran-coat, just to make the flour look white and pretty.

These phosphates, or mineral salts, are positively demanded by Nature in order to build normal bodies, brains and nerves, and in their lack physicians find one great cause of impoverished blood, listlessness, nervous prostration, kidney disease, etc.

Grape-Nuts, on the other hand, retains ALL the vital phosphates so richly grown by Nature in wheat and barley, as well as ALL the other nutritive elements of the grains. It provides these well-balanced values in a convenient, appetizing food, ready to eat from the package, fresh, crisp, and untouched by human hand.

A April of Grape Nuts with regular meals supplies admirably what white bread lacks.
